

Butler Fairbanks Indianapolis, Indiana

This 45,000-square-foot facility is designed to accommodate Butler University's Department of Telecommunication Arts as well as three other related departments: Computer Science, Communication Studies and Journalism. It houses a recording studio and the on-campus home for WTBU, a fully functioning public television station.

The building is a three story structural steel braced frame structure. One side supports an architectural precast concrete façade mimicking the limestone throughout campus. The other side facing White River supports a full three story curtain wall system.

FRP

